rickireign.com · a few words to get right

The layout is settled — this is only about the words. Pick the option closest to how you feel; there are no wrong answers, and most questions have an “Other” line if none fit. The small grey note under each question is just where it lives on the site.

How to answer: Put an X in the box next to your pick (or just highlight it). Where you see a blank line, type your own words. Then send the file back — whatever you mark, I'll apply directly in the site's editor.

A. Identity & positioning

1. Your hero opens with “Ricki Reign is a leadership strategist.” Does “leadership strategist” feel like the truest headline label for you?

[homepage hero — the label under your name]

- ☐ A. Yes — keep “leadership strategist.”
- ☐ B. Close, but I'd prefer “founder & facilitator.”
- ☐ C. Prefer something more embodied, e.g. “somatic leadership guide.”

D. Another term: Community Facilitator and Strategist

2. The hero headline is “Lead from steadiness.” Reaction?

[homepage hero — the big headline]

- ☐ A. Love it — keep.
- ☐ B. It's good, minor tweak.
- ☐ C. Feels a bit generic — want something more distinct.

D. Want it warmer / more personal:

3. Consistency check: the homepage leads with “leadership strategist,” but the footer and browser title still say “Founder, Facilitator & Organizational Leader.” Which should be your primary identity everywhere?

[site footer + browser/search title]

- ☐ A. “Leadership strategist” everywhere.

- ☐ B. “Founder, facilitator & organizational leader” everywhere.
- ☐ C. Blend: “leadership strategist” up top, the fuller title in the footer.

D. Other: _____

B. Voice & tone

4. Across the whole site, the voice is...

[whole site]

- ☐ A. Just right.
- ☒ B. A touch too polished / corporate — warm it up.
- ☒ C. A touch too soft / spiritual — make it more grounded and direct.
- ☐ D. Want it bolder / more confident.

It flips from being very corporate, title centric with words like founder and strategist. To being very spiritual with words like ancestral and remembering. So there's not continuity. Ideally, it would be less professional, and read more like a softer about page that is not centric on professional identity only. But gives the opportunity to explore those elements.

5. Which language feels most like you? (pick up to two)

[word choices across the site — pick up to two]

- ☐ A. Somatic · regulated nervous system · the body
- ☐ B. Ancestral · lineage · remembering
- ☐ C. Presence · steadiness · grounded
- ☐ D. Founder · organizations · leadership

C. Section by section

6. About is titled “A facilitator of remembering,” opening “Ricki Reign is a leadership strategist whose work sits where ancestral wisdom meets the demands of modern organizations...” (4 short paragraphs).

[homepage — About]

- ☐ A. Keep as-is — it sounds like me.
- ☒ B. Right direction, minor tweaks.

- ☐ C. Too long — tighten it.
- ☒ D. Doesn't sound like me — rework the voice.

It does sound like me. But it sounds like my professional life. It doesn't really tell about me, it only tells about what I do. I know that this will shift and change. I do not see copy as "final" and plan to be able to update this. For about me, I will likely write it myself once the website is complete. But what is written is relevant with minor tweaks. I think the spiritual language feels a bit odd with the organizational only because it is for different audiences.

7. The About pull-quote: "Leadership is a somatic practice before it is a strategic one."

[homepage — About pull-quote]

- ☐ A. Keep — it's a strong line.
- ☐ B. Keep the idea, reword slightly.
- ☒ D. Drop the quote.

C. Replace with a different line: it is blurring two concepts together. I don't have a perfect quote in mind to replace in this moment.

8. "The Work" groups your work into three arenas — Exhale Under Pressure, Community Birth Village, and Somatics (your 1:1 practice) — introduced with "The same practice shows up in three places..." Is that framing clear and right?

[homepage — "The Work" section]

- ☐ A. Clear and right.
- ☒ B. The idea is right; the labels/names need work.
- ☐ D. Confusing — rethink how these are grouped.

C. The order should change — which first?

The labels can be titles/ descriptions instead of business names:

"Embodiment Practices", "Leadership and Organizational Development", "Community Education"

9. The Somatics page button currently reads "Book a Discovery Call."

[Somatics page — the button]

- ☐ A. Keep it.
- ☒ B. Softer, e.g. "Schedule a Conversation" / "Reach out."
- ☐ C. More specific, e.g. "Book a 1:1 session."

D. Other: _____

The 1, 2, and 3 under somatics will need new titles. These are services and they will change. This will be something that is regularly updated as well. I would have to update with current services.

10. Newsletter invite: titled “Join the list,” with “Occasional notes on somatic leadership and ancestral remembering.”

[homepage — newsletter invite]

- ☐ A. Keep both.
- ☐ B. Reword the invite title.
- ☒ C. Reword the description (what subscribers get).
- ☒ D. Other: _____

Title: Join the community to learn more

Description: “Receive occasional events and updates” – that’s all for now. Will be updated once there is a stronger mission for the newsletter

11. The three guiding questions: “What would change if you led from your body, not just your mind?” · “Where are you bracing when you could be breathing?” · “What does your lineage already know that you are relearning?”

[homepage — the three guiding questions]

- ☐ A. Keep all three.
- ☒ C. Rewrite them.
- ☐ D. Remove this section.

B. Keep some, cut others — which?

Because guiding questions are deeply personal to my brand and what I am focusing on with clients, we can keep what’s there, and I will update this copy once the website is complete.

12. “Who is this for?” lists: founders/executives carrying real weight · leaders sensing the limits of mind-only strategy · people drawn to ancestral & somatic wisdom · organizations ready to lead with presence.

[homepage — “Who is this for?”]

- ☐ A. Accurate — keep.
- ☐ D. Reword for warmth/clarity.

B. Add / C. remove an audience:

I actually just think this is misplaced. There is no who this is for because the home page isn’t about offering services. It’s just a description of Reign. And each business has a different audience.

D. Priorities & guardrails

13. If we revise ONE thing first, it should be...

[what to revise first]

- ☒ A. The hero / identity line
- ☒ B. The About bio
- ☐ C. "The Work" framing
- ☐ D. The Somatics page
- ☐ E. The CTAs / newsletter

14. Any words, phrases, or claims that make you wince or feel off-brand?

[most useful answer — write freely]

I would probably remove ancestral remembering and this language in most places. It is central to how I describe my experience, but it is unrelated to any brand or service as a whole.

If "The Work" could be softened. Maybe "Work with Reign" or "What do I do" or something more simple.

"Connect" as a tab is great, and the section may be better to include the mailing list. The title of "Connect" at the bottom of the screen may be better written as "Contact" or "Send a Message".

There is a lot of combination of somatics and leadership, that can be separated. Organizational and leadership development are separate from Embodiment services.

Overall, I am very particular about website copy, and no matter who or what updates it, I will still add my own wording and personal touches. And likely, update sections quarterly. So getting it perfect is not a focus of mine.

Curious about where I could add a link for testimonials for somatics!

15. Words to AVOID going forward?

[words to avoid going forward — pick any]

- ☐ A. "strategist" / "strategic"
- ☐ B. "somatic" (too clinical?)
- ☒ C. "ancestral" / "lineage"
- ☐ D. "regulated nervous system"
- ☐ E. None — all fine.

F. Other: _____

Thank you, Ricki. Send the file back with your marks and I'll take it from here.
